The 6th Asian Youth Energy Summit (AYES) will feature Changing the Game, and exciting and simple energy policy planning game we've developed using Lego Bricks and Energy Trail, an experiential trail to showcase initiatives Singapore has implemented to move towards clean technology. This year's Energy Trail will focus on Solar Energy and Energy Efficiency. A panel discussion around the theme Global Challenges & Local Opportunities will give the audience a chance to interact with leaders in this field and understand the challenges involved.

Energy Carta is recruiting for the following positions:

Changing the Game facilitator: Conduct the exciting Lego game for University, Polytechnic and JC students, and spark off a lively discussion on South-east Asia's energy future. Learn and educate students about the future's energy needs and technology. This game was featured in The Straits Times on 7 Jun 2013: www.energycarta.org/images/m1.jpg

Changing the Game development team: Love playing board games? Like LEGOs? Keen to play a part in the world's sustainable development and energy movement? Join the dynamic team of game developers in making Changing the Game fun and exciting. Unleash your creativity and create a board game that will make a difference!

Outreach & Event planning: Promote the event to both international and local tertiary institutions. Facilitate the Summit and have the opportunity to interact closely with distinguished speakers and participants. Over the years we have seen over 1,200 local participants and 100 international participants!
