Visit by Mr. Erike Young, Global Safety Manager, Google Inc.,

On 29 Sep 2014, Mr. Erike Young, Global Safety Manager, Google Inc., visited Office of Safety, Health & Environment (OSHE) to share his experience and knowledge in enhancing safety management systems in public sector institutions. He has extensive experience in advising public sector institutions on establishing an effective safety culture and integrating risk management into safety management system.

During the visit, Mr. Young presented an overview of Enterprise Risk Management System and how risk management principles can be leveraged to enhance safety management system in an institution. He shared his experiences on how he used the risk management principles to support the mission and strategic direction of the institution. He also provided examples of how risk management principles can be used to identify mission critical safety and health goals so that allocation of resources can be prioritized.

The session was attended by Safety and Health Officers of various Faculties/Research Institutes in NUS. The sharing session ended with a lively discussion on different techniques that can be used to improve the safety culture in an institution.

Fig 1: Group Photo - OSHE staff and Mr. Erike Young